On their journey to China, the pandas were accompanied by animal care experts from the Smithsonian ' s National Zoo and Conservation Biology Institute and traveled in custom-built transport enclosures provided by FedEx. The pandas were the only cargo on the trans-Pacific flight from Washington ' s Dulles International Airport to China ' s Chengdu Shuangliu International Airport, aside from supplies such as bamboo, water, and their favorite treats, including sugar cane, apples, and pears.

“ We are deeply honored to again serve as the transportation provider of giant pandas. The safe delivery of Mei Xiang, Tian Tian, and Xiao Qi Ji is a testament to the company ' s commitment and ability to securely ship precious cargo, ” said Richard Smith, president and chief executive officer, Airline and International, FedEx. “ We are proud to be entrusted with transporting these beloved animals through our global integrated air and ground network. ”

Before their trip, the pandas spent time getting familiar with their crates to ensure a safe and comfortable flight. Upon arrival in Chengdu, Mei Xiang, Tian Tian, and Xiao Qi Ji were greeted on the tarmac by their new keepers before moving to the Shenshuping facility in Wolong, where they will quarantine for approximately 30 days.
