from pianissimo to fortissimo

the voice of an acoustic grand piano changes according to how it is played. yamaha's sounds are sampled according to keystroke strength for each key at 10 levels or more. the advanced wave memory (awm) dynamic stereo sampling technology analyzes these samples. then, it selects three to five levels* that best match your subtle touch on the keyboard. this enables you to directly transmit the delicate movements of your fingertips into expressive sound.

all the subtle capabilities of a grand piano key-off samples provide the delicate sound keys make when they are released. stereo sustain samples recreate the resonances of strings and soundboard when the damper pedal is pressed. string resonance samples provided the rich tones produced when one hammered string causes related strings to ring out in harmony. using these comprehensive gradations, clp300 series models can realistically reproduce the complex sounds of a grand piano.

usb connectivity* for storing and playing music insert an optional usb storage device into the usb port to save and transfer your performances.
