At the end of primitive society, the earliest currency was physical currency. Generally speaking, nomadic people use livestock and animal skins to realize the monetary function, while agricultural people use grain, cloth and silk, agricultural tools, pottery, seashells, pearl and jade as the earliest physical currency. Ancient Chinese coins originated in the Xia Dynasty, originated in the Shang Dynasty, developed in the Eastern Zhou Dynasty and unified in the Winning Qin Dynasty. After more than 4,000 years of history, they have created more than 70 world's largest coins. Moreover, the integrity of China's currency system, the richness of its categories, the clarity of its context and the breadth of its connotation are incomparable to any other country. The precious ancient coins are not only the physical object of the history of money, but also the witness of history. Copper coins in the Qing Dynasty followed the system of the Ming Dynasty, mainly casting small ordinary coins. Among the copper coins in the Qing Dynasty, Xianfeng Qian was the most complex. Qian Wen was divided into Tongbao, Chongbao and Yuanbao, with different face value and different money bureaus. In Qing Dynasty, most of the Folk Commerce used silver, while small money used money. Money and silver went hand in hand.

"Xianfeng" was the year of Wenzong in Qing Dynasty. The period of Xianfeng coincided with the climax of the revolutionary movement of Taiping Heavenly Kingdom. At this time, people's grievances were boiling. In order to survive, the Qing government made a great deal of fuss in the coin bank and passed the financial crisis on to the people. The coins of "Xianfeng Tongbao", "Xianfeng Chongbao" and "Xianfeng Yuanbao" have been introduced successively. Xianfeng Chongbao was cast during the reign of Wenzong Xianfeng in the Qing Dynasty. It was written in regular scripts, memorized Manchu, Manchu and Chinese, recorded in Chinese and recorded in Chinese. Because of its early foundry and wide circulation area, it is also a valuable coin that Guquan enthusiasts have been most concerned about and devoted to collecting and appreciating since ancient times. Among the many large amounts of money, we should recommend Xianfeng Chongbao as the top ten coins.
